

ISSUE #11

MAR 1ST, 2026

Wildflower Post

Newsletter

TODAY'S WRITER

Analisa Prophete

Analisa Prophete is a junior in high school from Westford, Massachusetts. She has been writing creatively for about five years, namely through short stories and poetry. She has also recently been recognized by the Scholastic Art & Writing Awards for her flash fiction piece.

WARNING: THIS POEM CONTAINS DARK THEMES AND MENTION OF DEATH

Lawless

ANALISA PROPHETE

Where the dark creatures lie
And the sun never hits
Where crows go to fly
And death follows spirits

A world full of nothing
Where survival is key
The air is stifling
But no one breaks free

Seasons change
But conditions do not
People are deranged
Lawless is where they are left to rot

The home of humanity
In its last stretch of survival
With waning morality
All are rivals

We have our conscience
And our world isn't flawless
But we should be cautious
So it doesn't become Lawless